Try to put well in practice what you already know; and in so doing, you will, in good time, discover the hidden things which you now enquire about. Practice what you know, and it will help to make clear what now you do not know.

Rembrandt

No great thing is created suddenly, any more than a bunch of grapes or a fig. If you tell me that you desire a fig, I answer you that there must be time. Let it first blossom, then bear fruit, then ripen.

Epictetus

By necessity, by proclivity, and by delight, we quote. —We quote not only books and proverbs, but arts, sciences, religions, customs, and laws; nay, we quote temples and houses, tables and chairs by imitation.

Emerson

Originality is nothing but judicious imitation.—The most original writers borrowed one from another. The instruction we find in books is like fire. We fetch it from our neighbor's, kindle it at home, communicate it to others, and it becomes the property of all.

Voltaire

Since we cannot get what we like, let us like what we can get.

Spanish Proverb

A man should never be ashamed to own that he has been in the wrong, which is but saying in other words that he is wiser today than he was yesterday.

Pope

Laff every time you pheel tickled, and laff once in awhile anyway.

Josh Billings

So many worlds, so much to do,
so little done, such things to be.

Tennyson

Finish each day and be done with it. You have done what you could; some blunders and absurdities crept in; forget them as soon as you can. Tomorrow is a new day; you shall begin it well and serenely and with too high a spirit to be encumbered with your old nonsense.

Emerson

This is the short and the long of it.

Shakespeare
